DOCKERS® CELEBRATES MOTHER’S DAY WITH 10,000 ACTS OF CHIVALRY

100 Khaki-Clad Men Takeover New York City and San Francisco and Ask Everyone to Join Them in Honoring Moms this Sunday

SAN FRANCISCO, May 5, 2010 – Who said chivalry is dead? This Mother’s Day, Dockers® is asking men to Wear the Pants™ by performing 10,000 acts of chivalry on the streets of New York and San Francisco. On Sunday, from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m., local time in each city, 100 khaki-clad men will flock to the streets, conducting 25 chivalrous acts per hour. The chivalrous acts include: distributing roses, opening doors, helping to carry luggage, hailing taxi cabs, offering directions and greeting moms.

“We are proud to champion a new definition of manhood. One that embodies the old and the new - values including chivalry, integrity and sensitivity,” said Jennifer Sey, the Vice President of Global Marketing for Dockers. “This Mother’s Day we want to celebrate chivalry by showing Moms across the country just how thankful we are for everything they do.”

Take a few extra minutes to hail a cab, open a door, or say “Happy Mother’s Day,” to a Mom you don’t know, and never ever forget your own Mom. Visit www.facebook.com/dockers to share posts and photos of how you’re proving chivalry exists this Mother’s Day. Those participating in Dockers® “10,000 Acts of Chivalry,” can also show their support on Twitter by using the #chivalryisnotdead hashtag this Mother’s Day.

Mother’s Day, one of the most popular holidays in the U.S. and celebrated on the second Sunday in May, was created by Anna Jarvis in Grafton, West Virginia, in 1908 as a day to honor one’s mother.¹ Jarvis wanted to accomplish her mother’s dream of making a celebration for all mothers, although the idea didn’t take off until she enlisted the services of wealthy Philadelphia merchant John Wanamaker.² She kept promoting the holiday until President Woodrow Wilson made it an official national holiday in 1914.³

“Our goal this Mother’s Day is to bring chivalry back,” said Karen Riley-Grant, Director of Global Consumer Marketing at Dockers. “We’re issuing a call to action to men across the country to Wear the Pants. Open a car door. Offer up your seat on the bus and wish every Mom you see, including your own, a Happy Mother’s Day.”
