BERLIN (July 7, 2011) – From July 7 until August 18, the Levi’s® brand will open the doors to the Levi’s® Print Workshop in Berlin. The Workshop is a community-based screen-printing space designed to facilitate creative production and collaboration. The Levi’s® Print Workshop will provide free screen printing equipment and supplies, offer a range of daily hands-on activities, as well as host a range of exhibitions and instructional workshops dedicated to the craft of screen printmaking. Based on the principles of craftsmanship, innovation, and the belief that there is meaning in every step of creating, the Workshop celebrates individual and collective passions and creativity of people from all walks of life.

Visitors to the Workshop will be able to use state of the art printing tools from the renowned specialist shop Rainer Schnell to create their own hand-printed T-shirts, postcards and digital artwork. The Levi’s® Print Workshop is the fourth in a series of Workshops dedicated to the art of craftsmanship and follows on the success of print, photo and film workshops in San Francisco, New York City and Los Angeles respectively.

_Pioneers Immortalized in Berlin by Artist Vhils to Celebrate Launch of ‘Go Forth’ Campaign_

The Workshop will serve as a community-based extension of the Levi’s® brand’s global creative platform, ‘Go Forth,’ which pays homage to the pioneering spirit of the brand, acts as a rally cry to create positive change in the world today and celebrates today’s pioneers who are taking action to build a new and better future. The Levi’s® brand collaborated with young Portuguese street artist Alexandre Farto, aka “Vhils,” to create a series of street murals that capture the faces of some of Berlin’s modern day pioneers in a dramatic and poetic way. These pioneers serve as an inspiration for the city and embody the ‘Go Forth’ spirit.

Vhils has sculpted the portraits of pioneers Fadi Saad, Various & Gould, Joe Hatchiban and Sven Marquardt into major building facades dotted throughout Berlin. These Berlin-based icons, as well as others including film director Ralf Schmerberg and artist and design collective Klub7, will exhibit their unique print interpretations at the Levi’s® Print Workshop and showcase what Berlin pioneers are doing for their city.

The Levi’s® Print Workshop will be open from Wednesday to Friday from 12.00-22.00 and on Saturday and Sunday from 11.00-21.00. “Alte Münze” is located near the famous Alexanderplatz on Am Krögel/ corner of Neue Jüdenstrasse, 10179 Berlin.
